

I think that lifting the cross-media ownership ban would be a dangerous thing that would allow fewer and fewer companies to control more and more of the news, and thusly, what Americans know about what's going on. I'm opposed to this. The news is already government-approved and corporation-sponsered as it is, putting the control in the hands of less giant corporations would be disastorous for America's common citizen. Just wanted to show where I stood on the issue.
